

Abstract

Disclosed is an assembled electromotive curtain for easy installation, simple manipulation, and convenient maintenance. The assembled electromotive curtain allows an opening and closing of the curtain along a rail, and includes a main controller provided with a motor and a control circuit, and a wire driving part received within and fixed by the rail, for transferring a curtain transferring wire using a rotational force of a rotational shaft of a motor.